Acceptable Loss is an awesome story!! I especially liked reading about the secret insertions into "no man's land" as the five-man LRRP teams operated without any support. It is edge of your seat suspense when these small groups are unknowingly trapped between large enemy forces and have to make their way to the pick-up point, precisely on time ...

Although no regular regiment exceeded 5/8 of its authorized strength and the states did not necessarily follow this organizational model, the diagram gives a good idea of what a full strength infantry regiment looked like arrayed in line of battle. The full strength of the regiment was 880 men (36 officers and 844 soldiers).
