Four new codes describing thrombolysis went into effect on January 1, 2013. These new codes bundle the surgical and the radiological supervision and interpretation portions of thrombolytic procedures but do not include the work of catheterizing and selecting the vessels to be treated. They also do ...

x Transcatheter aortic valve implantation (TAVI) has been revolutionary in the treatment of severe symptomatic aortic stenosis. Given the excellent evidence available from randomised trials, we now know that TAVI is superior to medical treatment in patients unsuitable for surgery and is equivalent, or even superior, in patients with high [1,2], intermediate [3,4] and low risk [5,6].
